Hamilton re-elected sheriff; Wallace keeps commission seat

Patrick and Williams-Zanders win open seats; county votes no on two of four amendments

Sheriff Michael Hamilton

Sheriff Michael Hamilton was re-elected Tuesday with 72 percent of the vote, 4,379 to 1,708 for Republican Kevin McDaniel, in unofficial returns with all 15 Hale County boxes reported.

The returns, reported by Probate Judge David Parker's office, were posted by the Secretary of State at 8:52 p.m. Tuesday. They are unofficial until the county canvassing board certifies them.

In County Commission District 1, Commissioner Don Wallace, a Republican, held his seat over Democrat Jonathan Rossell, 866 to 664. Wallace was first elected to the seat in 2022.

Democrat Charles Patrick won the open District 4 seat over Republican Beatrice Nichols, 980 to 443. Patrick defeated Commissioner Patti Rhodes in the Democratic primary in May.

Democrat Kaleda Williams-Zanders won District 1 on the Hale County Board of Education over Republican Brooke Seale McCrory, 880 to 338, with 32 write-in votes. The seat is held by Christopher Carter, who was not on the ballot.

Revenue Commissioner Andretta Skipper, unopposed, received 4,425 votes, and Eric A. Wiggins, unopposed for coroner, 4,315. State Sen. Bobby Singleton received 4,244 votes in District 24, state Rep. Curtis L. Travis 4,221 in District 72 and Yvette M. Richardson 4,148 for District 4 on the State Board of Education, all unopposed.

Hale County voters cast 6,149 ballots, 51.4 percent of the county's 11,957 registered voters.

In the statewide races, the county went to the Democratic candidate in every contest. Democrat Doug Jones carried the county over Republican Tommy Tuberville in the governor's race, 3,866 to 2,227, or 63 percent. U.S. Rep. Terri Sewell took 3,899 votes in the county to 2,197 for Republican Ammie Akin in the 7th Congressional District.

For the U.S. Senate seat Tuberville is giving up, Democrat Everett Wess led U.S. Rep. Barry Moore in the county 3,711 to 2,311. Democrat Phillip Ensler led Republican John Wahl for lieutenant governor, 3,748 to 2,292.

The rest of the ticket split along those same lines: Democrat Jeff McLaughlin over Republican Katherine Robertson for attorney general, 3,717 to 2,300; Democrat Wayne Rogers over

Smith Park nears the end of construction, Rural Studio says

Auburn University's Rural Studio has one concrete pour left to finish the walking trail at Smith Park in Greensboro, the studio said in an update on its website Monday, Nov. 2.

Students have completed 18 pours at the park so far, finishing the south loop of the trail, tying into the bathroom slab and edging the gravel courtyards at the entrance, where formwork for concrete benches is going in.

The chain-link screens that define the basketball court and the field are up. New students hung and secured the screens in August, and almost all the material was salvaged from the old baseball field fencing taken down at the beginning of 2025. The 36 bays vary in height and angle.

The mound was given its final shape in the spring and seeded, with hay spread over the seed. Grass now covers it.

The park's community space has electricity, and the gravel around it is finished, so the pavilion is ready for parties and cookouts, the studio said. The entrance courtyards are getting their final layers of gravel.

With cooler weather, the students have begun preparing the ground for shrubs and trees, removing com-

Council takes first step to outsource garbage collection in Greensboro

By: Brian Clements

The Greensboro City Council approved a motion to advertise a request for proposals for outsourcing the city's garbage collection services at its Tuesday, Oct. 27, meeting. Councilmember Mary Bragg made the motion. It was seconded by Councilmember Pearl Shepherd and passed unanimously.

Mayor Ralph Howard said the city currently pays $425,000 a year for garbage collection and a new garbage truck would cost more than $300,000.

Howard said current city garbage collection workers would not lose their jobs, but instead they will be paid by whichever company successfully bids for the city's trash collection contract.

Capt. Devoris Travis of the Greensboro Police Department asked the city's permission to purchase new equipment to upgrade the department's computer and video capabilities in an effort to strengthen security and evidence collection.

Travis said his depart-

ALDOT to resurface 6.3 miles of Alabama 61 southeast of Greensboro

The Alabama Department of Transportation plans to resurface a portion of Alabama 61 in Hale County from County Road 48 to the Alabama 14 intersection southeast of Greensboro.

The 6.3-mile project is expected to begin Tuesday, Nov. 3, and will continue until early 2027, weather permitting, the department said in a release Tuesday.

A pilot car will guide traffic through the work zone. Drivers should expect possible delays and are encouraged to use caution in the work zone, the department said.

APAC-Alabama was awarded the project at $2.62 million.

Real-time traffic updates are available through the ALGOTraffic app or at ALGOTraffic.com.

Greensboro man arrested on domestic violence warrant from 2024

A Greensboro man was arrested Oct. 23 on a misdemeanor domestic violence warrant sworn out in August 2024, according to Hale County District Court records.

Marcus Ford, 51, of Greensboro is charged with domestic violence in the third degree, a Class A misdemeanor. A sworn complaint filed by a Hale County sheriff's deputy accuses Ford of domestic violence on or about Aug. 25, 2024, against a woman identified in the complaint as his girlfriend.

The complaint was sworn Aug. 28, 2024, and the case was filed in district court Oct. 23, the day of the arrest, court records show.

Bond was set at $6,000, and Ford remained in the Hale County Jail as of court records dated Oct. 23. No hearing date had been set as of that record.

Greensboro man charged with felony drug possession

A Greensboro man was arrested Oct. 25 on a felony drug charge, according to Hale County District Court records.

Kerry Ladell Hogan, 41, of Greensboro is charged with unlawful possession of a controlled substance, a Class D felony. A sworn complaint filed by a Greensboro police officer alleges that on or about Oct. 25, Hogan unlawfully possessed a controlled substance, a white powdery substance that appeared to be cocaine, while at or near the Marathon in Greensboro.

Court records also list two traffic charges against Hogan: driving while revoked and an open container violation, a Class C misdemeanor.

The complaint was sworn and filed Oct. 26, court records show. Bond was set at $3,500, and Hogan remained in the Hale County Jail as of court records dated Oct. 26. No hearing date had been set as of that record.

Cooking in the Black Belt

By Casey Roberts

Frankly, I've been in a bit of a slump. Maybe all this pressure is finally catching up with me. Last week, it seemed like everything that could go wrong, did. We ran out of supplies to finish last week's print runs and I woke up naively thinking that last Wednesday would be like any other Wednesday. I got up, prepared the pocketbook roll dough, washed the dishes, and set down to write a Marion City Council story. By 10:30 that morning, I was driving the truck to New Albany, Mississippi to meet a man from a little place called Pocahontas, Arkansas for toner and drum cartridges. The truck, in case you're wondering how much bad luck has fallen on us, is now in the driveway with a flat tire, a twisted nail sticking out of it. As our friend Tim says, "What a time to be alive!"

This northeastern corner of Mississippi is only a stone's throw away from glorious Memphis, Tennessee, as well as being the tail-end of the Black Belt region. No wonder the landscape felt so familiar. Unlike Kentucky, the landscape is unmolested by data centers and strip mall developments, with the exception of these Main Street Mississippi communities. These towns brandished a reflective green sign to such effect for all the highway traffic to see.

Shamefully, I must admit, I have spent little time in Mississippi, or as our friend Brian calls it, 'Backwards Alabama.' Aside from past visits to see my aunt or stopping for Ward's on the way to or from New Orleans, I foolishly wrote off Mississippi as a land beneath my interests. As of late, I've come around to the idea that we really aren't so different after all, just in our perceptions of each other. This past week was a big one with political ads in just about every paper, a Perry County Historical Society Banquet, our friends' annual Wig-O-Ween party. If we haven't been printing, we've been cooking. If we haven't been cooking, we've been going out and about. Sleeping? At this point, it's a thing of the past in the newspaper world.

Despite my contributions of yeast rolls and champagne punch, I still thought I ought to bring a dessert of some kind, but when could I find the stamina to undertake such a task? That's when I remembered reading about a gas station in Mississippi that sold caramel cakes, which apparently is a cake the Mississippians do exceptionally well. Caramel cake is one that I have yet to master, but have always revered since the glory days of "Chug" Pruitt and her 8-layer caramel cakes I'd buy whole from The Mustard Seed in Demopolis. So, I put John to the task of finding us a caramel cake dealer while I drove us further north, further west. Conveniently enough he found a place called Sugaree Bakery a block away from Latham's Hamburger Inn where we were headed for lunch. Both being in New Albany, we'd be killing three birds with one stone in the shape of a Toyota Tacoma.

Before New Albany, I had grand plans of sharing the champagne punch recipe, which I still might do one of these days. After New Albany, I wanted to share with you the lunch we had which we haven't stopped talking about since last week. We finally got to try a northeastern Mississippi delicacy: the dough burger. A dough burger, or slug burger, is a unique contribution to the burger canon. A product of wartime scarcity compounded by a Great Depression, cooks would stretch their ground beef with flour, cornmeal, potato starch, etc. then flatten these patties out before frying them to crisp perfection. Slap some grilled onions, yellow mustard and pickles on top and you've got an evergreen classic on your hands. We sat in the truck scarfing down our double dough burgers in front of an acupuncturist's clinic, when out walked an Amish family, bonnets, beards, and all. As it turns out, there's a pocket of Amish country in that northeastern corner of Mississippi. Who knew?

So, on Sunday, John found a recipe and I watched as he put it all together so that I could relay the recipe to you, dear reader. And now with the onset of Impossible and Beyond meat as vegetarian alternatives, this is a recipe I can imagine anyone enjoying. Although, I'd be curious how the imitation meat holds up to all the handling. Just be warned, this isn't anything meant for high company, unless the high company is just really into greasy spoons.

Dough Burger, or Slug Burger

1.25 to 1.5 pounds ground beef (ideally 75 to 25 fat ratio)

3/4 cups all-purpose flour

1/4 cup whole milk

1 egg

Seasoning salt and black pepper, to taste

Combine all ingredients thoroughly in a bowl. Fill a large, cast iron frying pan with a neutral frying oil over medium-high heat. Peanut or corn oil works best for this. Line a work surface with parchment paper, then tear another equal size piece of parchment paper. Set aside. Working with the hamburger meat mixture, form a small ball, no larger than a tennis ball. Place the ball onto the parchment-lined work surface, top with the additional parchment paper, then flatten the ball with your hands into a patty. Remove the top layer of paper and, using a spatula, remove the patty and slide into the hot frying oil. Fry roughly three minutes on each side or until there is a deep, browned crust on both sides. Remove to a paper towel-lined plate or baking sheet. Continue with the remaining patties. Yields about one dozen patties.

You'll want a high fat ratio for this burger for the starch to have something to absorb. One thing I'd be curious to try would be white cornmeal mixed in and fried in corn oil. That just sounds magnificent to me. This one, though, has no downsides. Well, aside from its health factor, I suppose, but who ever went to a diner looking for health food?

In the way of seasoning salt, may I point you to our latest obsession, which is the Conecuh brand seasonings. There's one for pork and poultry and another for steaks and hamburgers. Really, I can't see how you could go wrong with either in your arsenal. To be quite frank, way more seasoning went into ours. Onion and garlic powder, smoked paprika, some cayenne. It's a blank canvas, so experiment with what you like.

To serve, we toasted up some potato buns, had some onions grilling in a second pan, and pulled some 14-Day Pickles out of the fridge with the Heinz Yellow Mustard, just like we had them Wednesday. Yet, again, treat this as a free pass to play around with what you want on your buns.

For those of you wondering why it's also called a slug burger, it's really a clever one. Some of you may remember folks referring to fake nickels as slugs, but would you say that this is a fake burger? I certainly wouldn't. Sure, it's quite novel to deep fry a patty rather than grilling it, but the crust you get is phenomenal. Plus, I've seen those grotesque videos of cheeseburgers dipped in funnel cake batter and deep fried. Overkill? Sure. It's still a burger, though. Speaking of things named after money, for Wig-O-Ween I brought a papermached, lopsided Furby costume and something called Cheese Wads. A wad of cheese is something I feel like I heard from James Cagney in The Public Enemy or some such 1930s gangster movie. Cheese wads, though, are quite interesting. Something between a Rice Krispie treat and a cheese coin; otherwise known as a cheater's cheese straw. Maybe that'll be next week's contribution. We'll see where the wind takes me! Oh, and how it's been windy! I'm surprised it hasn't blown half the cats away. Maybe if I eat enough dough burgers I'll be sufficiently anchored to the earth to be a pillar for windswept creatures for miles around. At least, that's how heavy I felt after two rounds of double dough burgers midday on Sunday. Someone tell Hilary Duff to stop shilling this Ladder app to me. I get it, I need to work out! I don't need Lizzie McGuire making me feel more like a couch potato than I already do. Oh well, guess it's time to dust off the aerobics tapes again. Now where are my leg warmers?

Carlean (Hunter) Kendrick

Carlean (Hunter) Kendrick, 90, died October 20.

Carlean (Hunter) Kendrick was born on January 19, 1936, in Sawyerville, to Naomi Hunter and Frank Hunter. She was the fourth of seven children. Both of her parents preceded her in death. During her early years, Carlean attended Hale County Training School in Greensboro. She was a hardworking, determined, and independent businesswoman who built a life of entrepreneurship and success in Ohio. Carlean and her husband Sylvester launched out in business in their early years together, opening Twin Oaks Coffee Shop that served many in the community. She decided to move back to Alabama to build a home. Throughout those years, she owned and operated several businesses in Alabama, including a recreation center, pool hall, and an ice cream store.

She was an exceptionally talented pool player and proudly passed her skills on to some of her children. In her later years, Carlean discovered and embraced her talent for sewing. She became a gifted seamstress who made hats, tablecloths, clothing, and curtains. She also had a special love for gardening and was blessed with a true green thumb. Whether planting flowers or tending to her garden, she found joy in nurturing the things she loved. Carlean also enjoyed ordering and reading books about nature, natural healing, and the body's ability to heal. Above all, Carlean was a devoted mother who took extraordinary pride in her children's education and future. She believed in the importance of education and made it a priority to remain actively involved in her children's academic lives. She faithfully attended parent-teacher conferences and made sure her children had the support and encouragement they needed to succeed. Her determination and love were especially evident in her commitment to her youngest daughter, Marcialena, as she worked hard to ensure that she was the first child to attend and graduate from college. Carlean was determined to pay her daughter's tuition for her first year. She was willing to make sacrifices to give her children opportunities for a brighter future. Carlean was a loving and devoted mother who cared for her son, Patrick, after he was diagnosed with a long term health issue.

She remained dedicated to his well-being, provided him with love, support, and care throughout his journey. She was also a compassionate caregiver who moved back to Alabama to lovingly care for her parents, grandmother, and husband Sylvester Kendrick until the end of their lives. Her willingness to care for those who had cared for her reflected the depth of her heart and the importance she placed on family.

She was a nurturing woman whose love extended beyond words and was shown through her actions. Caring for her loved ones was a testament to her strength, selflessness, and the compassion she carried throughout her life. Her sons, William, and Arthur helped as caregivers for their mom for a season while she was in Alabama. Her three daughters, likewise, lovingly cared for her and their brother Patrick during the last years of their life, with the help of two committed, caring, and compassionate caregivers Wanda Golden and Renee Wiley.

Carlean accepted Christ at an early age in Sawyerville. Her faith was an important part of her life journey, some of which was revealed by the many scriptures she underlined in her Bible. She was a longtime member of New Hope Missionary Baptist Church in Sawyerville. She leaves behind a legacy of perseverance, hard work, determination, and love for her family. Carlean (Hunter) Kendrick went home to be with the Lord on Tuesday, October 20. Preceding her in death were three children, Sylvester Kendrick Jr., Arthur S. Kendrick and, immediately after her, her son Patrick Kendrick; and two sisters and one brother, Leola Pride, Marie Winn, and Theodore R. Hunter (Maxine). Carlean leaves to cherish her precious memories her loving children, William Kendrick, Gail R. Reese (Marvin), Donzella Hurt, and Marcialena Kendrick-Rivers (Michael); and her siblings, Mary L. Wiley (Jerome), Nancy Johnson (William, deceased), and Frank Hunter Jr.

Her legacy continues through her 26 grandchildren, 36 great-grandchildren, three great-great-grands and numerous nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles, cousins, and dear friends.

A joint service for Carlean Kendrick and her son Patrick was held Wednesday, October 28, at Bethany Christian Church, 3940 Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, Cleveland, Ohio, with the wake at 5:30 p.m. and the funeral at 6 p.m.

Patrick Oliver Kendrick

Patrick Oliver Kendrick, 65, died October 21.

Patrick Oliver Kendrick was born on January 11, 1961, in Cleveland, Ohio, to Sylvester Kendrick Sr. and Carlean (Hunter) Kendrick. He was the fifth of seven children. His father preceded him in death. During his early years, Patrick attended Cleveland Heights High School, where he was an exceptional football player. He was a good-hearted child who stayed quiet and kept to himself. His mother would often say, "He was never a trouble child." Patrick had a gentle spirit and was known for his calm and reserved nature.

At an early age, Patrick was diagnosed with a long-term health issue. His brother William did a great job helping his mom to stabilize him in the first year. Throughout his journey, his mother stood faithfully by his side, providing him with love, support, and care. Despite the challenges he faced, Patrick was known throughout the family for being exceptionally neat and clean. He took pride in keeping his room tidy and folding his clothes neatly. These simple habits reflected the care he took in his daily life. As his mother's dementia progressed, Patrick lovingly stepped in to help care for her. The bond they shared was truly special. They were inseparable, and he took immense pride in looking after the woman who had always been there for him. His love for his mother was evident in the time, attention, and devotion he gave her. Patrick also enjoyed taking walks to the park and going to the store to get his favorite snacks. It was often the simple pleasures in life that brought him joy. In September 2026, during his final moments, Patrick gave his life to Christ when his sister, Gail, gave him the plan of salvation. This was a precious and meaningful moment for his family, bringing comfort and hope in knowing that his final days included a step of faith.

Patrick will be remembered for his quiet spirit, his gentle heart, his love for his mother, and the unique qualities that made him special to those who knew and loved him. Though his earthly journey has ended, the memories he leaves behind will forever remain in the hearts of his family and friends. Patrick went home to be with the Lord on Wednesday, October 21. Preceding him in death were two brothers, Sylvester Kendrick Jr. and Arthur S. Kendrick. Patrick leaves to cherish his precious memories his loving brothers and sisters, William Kendrick, Gail R. Reese (Marvin), Donzella Hurt, and Marcialena Kendrick Rivers (Michael), along with a host of aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins, and friends who will forever hold him close in their hearts.

A joint service for Patrick Kendrick and his mother was held Wednesday, October 28, at Bethany Christian Church, 3940 Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, Cleveland, Ohio, with the wake at 5:30 p.m. and the funeral at 6 p.m.

Willie Stevenson

Willie Stevenson, 87, died October 25.

Willie Stevenson was born on April 30, 1939, in Newbern, to the late Edith Jones and Willie Stevenson Sr.

Willie was lovingly raised by his grandmother, Lydia Jackson; his aunts, Martha Shepherd and Caroline "Patsy" Caldwell; and his uncle, Charlie Jones. Growing up, Willie was surrounded by family and shared a special bond with cousins who were more like brothers and sisters. They grew up together, shared childhood memories, and developed a closeness that remained throughout their lives. They were cousins by blood, but brothers and sisters by heart.

Willie accepted Christ at an early age and carried his love for God throughout his life. He later joined New Pentecostal Holiness Church in Greensboro, and subsequently became a member of Pine Grove Baptist Church. Willie loved the Lord, and his faith was an important part of who he was. His favorite scripture was John 14:1-6 (KJV).

If there was one thing folks knew about Willie, it was that he loved to laugh. He enjoyed a good laugh, a good conversation, and the simple pleasure of being around family and friends. Willie did not need anything fancy to enjoy life. Sometimes just being together, sharing stories, and finding something to laugh about was enough. Those are the little things that made Willie special, and those are the things his family will remember most.

Although Willie never married or had children of his own, he was blessed with a family whose love went far beyond traditional titles. The cousins he grew up with were his brothers and sisters at heart, and their children were part of that same close family circle. They shared more than family ties; they shared a lifetime of memories and a love that could never be measured.

On Sunday, October 25, at the age of 87, Willie departed this earthly life. Though his time here has come to an end, the memories he leaves behind will continue to bring comfort and smiles to those who knew and loved him.

Willie was preceded in death by his parents, Edith Jones and Willie Stevenson Sr., and his beloved cousins, who were more like brothers to him, Lee Shepherd Jr. and Alphonso Shepherd Sr. Willie shared an especially close bond with Alphonso, whom he affectionately considered his favorite.

He leaves to cherish his memory his beloved cousins, who were raised alongside him as brothers and sisters: Jesse Shepherd (Shirley), Martha Thomas (the late Robert Thomas), Pearl Shepherd, Melnee Henderson (Bobby), and Willie Shepherd, all of Greensboro.

Willie also shared a special bond with his cousin, Rhonnica Johnson, who was like a daughter to him and held a special place in his heart.

He will also be lovingly remembered by the children and families of his cousins, who were all an important part of his extended family, along with a host of other relatives and friends.

As we reflect on Willie's life, we are thankful for the 87 years God allowed him to be part of our family. We will remember his laughter, his love for God, and the special place he held in our hearts.

"Cousins by blood, but brothers and sisters by heart."

Services were held Sunday, November 1, at noon at New Life Missionary Baptist Church, Bishop Steven C. Moore, pastor.

Sheriff congratulates Hale County Wildcats and Moundville Braves on youth championships

Hale County Sheriff Michael Hamilton congratulated the Hale County Wildcats youth football team and the Moundville Braves baseball team on winning their championships in a message from the Sheriff's Office on Sunday, Nov. 1.

"As your Sheriff, I'm proud to celebrate our youth and the community that stands behind them," Hamilton wrote.

He thanked the coaches, families and fans who supported the players.

The Citizens Bank

Celebrating 50 years
1976-2026

Dear Customers:

We have exciting news! The Citizens Bank will be celebrating our 50th anniversary in business this year. As we reflect back over the past fifty years of business none of this would have been possible without YOU, our customers.

When we opened our doors in November 1976, the Bank's goal was to provide exceptional customer service and to meet the needs of all within the community in which we serve. We appreciate your continued confidence, loyalty and trust in us as we strive to make our community a better place to live, work and do business.

We want to say Thank you for your business and continued support over the years. To show our deepest appreciation and gratitude, we are turning our 50th anniversary into a celebration for you. We will be having special drawings throughout the month of November as a token of our appreciation to you, our customers. We invite you to stop by and pay us a visit during this special celebration.

Thank you again for an incredible 50 years. We look forward to serving you and our community for many more years to come.

With Our Sincere Appreciation,

The Staff and Board of Directors
of The Citizens Bank

Clear Landing, Inc. will hold a free Hale County Land & Legacy Workshop from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 7, at the Greensboro Recreational Center, 515 Green St.

The workshop is for landowners, heirs to family land and anyone who wants to protect property for future generations.

It will have presentations, one-on-one consultations with attorneys on heirs' property and estate planning, technical assistance and a free lunch.

Qualifying landowners may also be eligible for free estate planning services, including wills, durable powers of attorney, life estate deeds where appropriate and advance medical directives.

Clear Landing asks people to register through the QR code on its flyer or the form linked in its Facebook post.

Clear Landing is holding the workshop with the Sustainable Forestry & Land Retention Network, the U.S. Endowment for Forestry & Communities, Gregory Varner & Associates, P.C., Rural Studio and the Virginia Caples Lifelong Learning Institute.

Bishop leads homecoming service at St. Andrew's in Prairieville

Pictured above: Bishop Richard Lawson is joined by members of the Black Belt Episcopal clergy on Sunday, October. 18 at St. Andrew's Church in Gallion, along with confirmand Jordan Elizabeth Tippett and Kitty Johnson of Greensboro. Johnson was received as a member of the Episcopal Church at the service on Sunday, Oct. 18.

The Rt. Rev. Richard T. Lawson III, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Alabama, celebrated the annual homecoming service at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Prairieville on Sunday, Oct. 18. He was assisted by the Rev. Jane Major, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greensboro.

Parishioners from more than nine Episcopal churches across the Black Belt filled the church to overflowing, the diocese said. Jordan Elizabeth Tippett was confirmed during the service, and Kitty Johnson of Greensboro was received as a member of the Episcopal Church.

The service program listed the parishes represented: St. John's, Forkland; St. Paul's, Greensboro; Trinity, Demopolis; St. Wilfrid's, Marion; St. Mark's, Boligee; St. Stephen's, Eutaw; Holy Cross/St. Michael's, Uniontown/Faunsdale; and St. Paul's, Carlowville. A potluck lunch on the church grounds followed the service.

Lawson was consecrated in June as the 13th bishop of Alabama. St. Andrew's, built in 1853 and consecrated in 1858, is a National Historic Landmark and is used for occasional services.
